Yeats' life encompassed the turn of the nineteenth century and the drowning of the 'ceremony of innocence'. As a passionate Irishman, he was at the fulcrum of one of the vortices of this process. He was pivotally involved in the ongoing development of Irish nationalism and also in its cultural history, from Cuchulain (and before) to the Abbey Theatre.

'The Man and the Echo' is from Yeats' 'Final Poem' collection and was written in 1938-9. It was one of Yeats' last poems as the profound poet died at the age of 74 in 1939. This haunting poem tells us of Yeats' imaginary dialog with his very own echo asking about life and death taking place in a mystical place.
